

MORNING APPEAL.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 18

A DARING PLAYWRIGHT.

The spectacular sensation in Bronson Howard's war play "Sheridan," is the appearance of General Sheridan on horseback in his famous ride from Winchester to the front at the battle of Cedar Creek. This is certainly a daring experiment, even for so veteran a playwright as Mr. Howard. No one has yet ventured to make General Washington a character in a play, though it is ninety years since the first President breathed his last at Mount Vernon. Much less, it would seem, would anyone attempt the impersonation of Lincoln and Grant. It is well known several attempts to put the character of Napoleon Bonaparte on the stage have been dire failures. Yet Mr. Howard has ventured to take General Sheridan, who is only a few months dead, and make him a living personality in his play. And what is more to the purpose, he has apparently succeeded. It is true that General Sheridan is not, strictly speaking, a character in the play. No words are put in his mouth, and his appearance on the stage is limited to less than a minute, but, even under such conditions, it was a serious question how the audience would accept the innovation. So cleverly was the thing arranged, however, that the tableau of Sheridan's Ride was exceedingly effective.

The editor of the Judge is a great boy says Joe Howard in the New York Press. When Wilde was here he asked him what he would charge to go to Mt. McGregor and pretend to be the recipient of a complimentary breakfast. Oscar asked $200. Arkell paid it, and invited eighty Saratoga visitors to meet him. Then he ran frequent trains up to the mountain hotel. Thousands made the trip to see Wilde eat. Wilde was then paid $50 for telegraphing a regret to an invitation in Saratoga and saying he couldn't persuade himself to leave the trees on Mt. McGregor. Arkell cleared about $3000 on the job.

The claim of Ben Holladay against the Government for $600,000 for Indian depredations upon his overland stage route was knocked down last week at Portland to General Ingalls for $750. Ingalls is executor of Mrs. Holladay's estate, and will make an appeal to Congress on behalf of her two children. President Lincoln promised that the full claim should be paid, the Senate scaled it one-half, and the Government finally offered $100,000, which Holladay refused. It is now thought Congress will vote this sum to Holladay's two orphan children.

Archdeacon Farrar's fervid plea for the establishment of an order of medicant monks in the Episcopal Church in England and the United States meets with a very chilling response from the Church organs. After mercilessly ridiculing the whole idea, The Churchman says that even if such an order were desirable, it could not be founded by a well paid, well-fed archdeacon.

Russell Harrison receives marked attention from the railway officials of England. They do not know exactly who he is, but they have heard that he has dined with the Queen and that is sufficient for them. Furthermore, his baggage is marked R. H., which they interpret "Royal Highness," and so he travels about in delightful style.

Speaking of Government contracts for advertising. The APPEAL will sell claims for the U. S. Government advertising for ten cents on a dollar. Every publisher in Nevada knows it cost more than an advertising bill is worth to collect it from the U. S. Government.

The Rea dredging machine which was to lift several millions of dollars from the bed of the Carson, is not lifting anything to speak of. It looks as if the mills haven't been losing near as much of the precious metal as they claimed.

Cough! and Cough!! and Cough!!!
What in the world is the reason you will cough and keep coughing and still keep trying inferior medicines when BEGG'S' CHERRY COUGH SYRUP will positively relieve your cough at once? This is no advertising scheme, but an actual fact, and we guarantee it. W. H. Chedie, Druggist.

Mat. McCabe, of New Brunswick, Ill., offers to pay five dollars to any person troubled with bloody flux, who will take Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy according to directions and does not get well in the shortest possible time. One half of a 25 cent bottle of this remedy cured him of bloody flux, after he tried other medicines and the prescriptions of physicians without benefit. Mr. McCabe is perfectly safe in making this offer, as more than a thousand bottles of this remedy are sold each day and it has never been known to fail in any case of colic, cholera morbus, dysentery, diarrhoea or bloody flux, when the plain printed directions were followed. For sale by G. C. Thaxter.
